I want to redirect to login page after ajax request for login. Please help. I tried different methods but it did not work. $this->get('security.token_storage')->setToken($token) ->clearCredentials() ->setAuthenticated(true); return $this->render('user/login.html.twig', ['is_ajax' => $this->get('request')->isXmlHttpRequest(), 'token' => $token]); A: As you're calling clearCredentials(), you're basically saying: don't keep the credentials stored on the user any more. The next call to your action will require them again. You should keep them stored somewhere in the session. The tricky part with the session is that Symfony doesn't load it by default. You have to do that manually. Something along these lines should work for you: $session = $this->get('session'); $session->set('_sf2_flashes', []); $session->set('firebase.auth.onAuthStateChanged', function($firebase) use ($token) { $firebase->setAuthStateChanged($token); }); The previous code will load the session class, retrieve the currently set flash data, clear the current flash data and set a new one for Firebase auth. You can also access $this->get('session'), I usually just use the service container, which doesn't require me to pass $container as an argument, like so: $session = $container->get('session');
